Opportunity Summary:
This annual program is designed to encourage innovative and sustained growth of Japanese studies in the United States. Applicants should formulate convincing proposals that will help stimulate and respond energetically to substantial initiatives in Japanese Studies.

Grant coverage may include support for faculty, instructor, or staff salaries, travel expenses, honoraria for lectures, visiting scholar support, graduate and undergraduate support, acquisition of research and teaching materials, conference and seminar expenses, acquisition of library and digital resources.

Strong consideration will be given to proposals that identify and respond to national needs in Japanese Studies. Applications that create tenure or tenure-track positions in Japanese Studies are especially welcome.

Eligibility & Requirements:
- The aim of the project must be to promote Japanese Studies.
- Projects must fulfill the following requirements to be eligible for application:
  - They must not be used for political, religious, social welfare, or commercial activities.
  - They must not be activities in support of specific doctrines or claims.
- Projects must commence between April 1, 2019 and March 31, 2020.
- Applicants to this program are not eligible to apply to the IPS Small Grant Program for fiscal 2019-2020.
- Japanese language-related components may be supported if they are part of a more comprehensive Japanese Studies project.
- The following proposals are not eligible:
  - Projects in the field of medicine, manual training or natural sciences
  - Organization of or participation in sporting events and training
  - Projects in the field of art (art-related projects such as exhibitions, film series, etc. that form a portion of a larger, comprehensive Japanese Studies project may be funded)
  - Goodwill exchanges
  - Social welfare or international development projects
  - Tourist-oriented programs
